By Bill Cormier ATLANTA (AP) Congressman John Lewis of Georgia announced Sunday that he has stage IV pancreatic cancer, vowing he will stay in office and fight the disease with the tenacity with which he fought racial discrimand ination other inequalities dating to the civil rights era.

Ð

Lewis, the youngest and last survivor of the Big Six civil rights activists in a group once led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., said in a statement that the cancer was detected earlier this month during a routine medical visit.

He said subsequent tests confirmed the diagnosis of stage IV pancreatic cancer." I have been in some kind of fight — for freedom, equality, basic human rights — for nearly my entire life. I have never faced a fight quite like the one I have now," said Lewis, 79.

2019: A Momentous Year

My Day By Dr. J. Ester Davis

What did 2019 do for you? What did you celebrate the most? How much did you learn?

In 2019, Dr. Linda Amerson, Valder Beebe and I were selected as cover girls for an international magazine "Entrepreneurs of Color" based out of Atlanta, Georgia. The publisher mentioned early in our conversation that he wanted to design a means of comcolor around the world. He further wanted all three of us on the cover. Our next decision was where to do the photo session. Well, we decided to add another women of color. This photo was taken on a hot summer day on "Ann Williams Way", in the Arts District, Downtown Dallas. Mrs. Ann Williams is the Founder of the Dallas Black Dance Theater.

The "Power of Three" was foundationally created to reach more of a universal audience. You see Linda, Valder and I are internet host with difference formats, audiences and styles. Combining our numbers, brands and subjects we anticipated a larger global presence... and our expectations were overwhelming. Just our combined years in media (television, radio, print magazines, community) totaled over sixty(60)years. This concept rose very rapidly and within a few months we were receiving calls nationally, internationally with an increase in speakmunication among women of ing engagements. The questions were mild ones at first . . . the ride was a wild one. But we quickly recognized that other regions were emulating our vision and 'morning calm' as one reader referenced to the cooperative movement.

> Women are amazing. Women rock!!!. Women make it happen. And when combined with a ocean scope, there is a tidal wave of wonder and 'can do' spirit. But the secret is you never know until you make that little step beginning. We heard from so many women, a few Dads, one applauding us as 'icicles cascading down so impressive it looks like works of art'.

> The final point here is 2020 is upon us. More challenges await us. Make it a more colorful year. . . and always remember to 'color within the lines'.

Happy New Year!

Setting aside hundreds or thousands of dollars for an emergency - and not using it - can seem like a challenge when you have bills and other responsibilities. But building an emergency fund can be done in phases over time, and you can make small changes now to get start growing your fund. Every dollar you save now can help cushion when the next emergency happens.

The Federal Reserve Board reported recently that 40% of people in the U.S. said they would have trouble covering a $400 emergency. Now think back to the last time you had an emergency or unexpected expense. Maybe it was a car repair or medical bill or even paying all your bills until you found a new job. Were you confident you had enough money to cover it?

Setting aside hundreds or thousands of dollars for an emergency and not using it – can seem like a challenge when you have bills and other responsibilities. But building an emergency fund can be done in phases over time, and you can make small changes now to get start growing your fund. Every dollar you save now can help cushion when the next emergency happens.

1. Open and set up automatic deposits to a savings account.

First come up with an amount you can afford to save and put toward an emergency fund every month. Consider saving this money in a separate account to help you stay focused on building those savings and avoid spending it. Automatic deposits can make saving easy. For help figuring out what to pay first, check out ® financial education program.

Reduce your spending. 2.

If you need to change your spending so you have enough money to put aside, start by reviewing your expenses - large and small. For example, the total cost of dining out may be larger than you think. With the average household spending $3,365 a year on eating out, cutting just two meals out a month (meals on average cost $12), saves around $288 a year.1 Another quick way to cut spending is to cancel any memberships and subscriptions you use infrequently or don't need. Reviewing and cutting your expenses doesn't have to be a sacrifice, but rather a chance to adjust your spending and saving in line with your priorities.

Find ways to make extra back up. 3.

ties, whether extra hours or oneoff projects, can help bring in extra money to build your emergency fund plus support other financial goals.

"extra" 4. Save money.

Have you received a tax refund, gift, bonus, or raise recently? Consider putting that extra cash into your savings account. Remember - keeping it out of reach of your checking account means it's harder to spend and there's a higher chance of saving it.

5. Create a savings challenge

You might have started with a smaller savings goal so your fund could grow little by little. Challenge yourself to make a bigger deposit like $50 next month instead of the $25 you deposit on a monthly basis. Then make the same goal again in a few months or even increase it a little. Any amount you contribute is a step in the right direction.

By their nature, emergencies happen when you don't expect them, but planning for them just in case can help you handle them. That's why an emergency fund is there. If you do have to tap into your emergency savings, that's what it's for, but get back on track by committing to building it right

COMMENTARY: A SHARP TONGUE CUTS FROM THE INSIDE OUT SPIRITUALLY SPEAKING...

By James A. Washington, Publisher, The Dallas Weekly

Growing up, I was never a student of the Bible even though I grew up surrounded by the best kind of Christians there were: the love-filled family kind.

I believe I am now being constantly moved by the Holy Spirit (I hope) to see the simplicity in the scripture I now study. As such, I am finding myself gravitating to ministers, pastors and saints as they dissect in sermon and prayer the incredible power of the tongue; yes, that small but dangerously lethal weapon housed in one's mouth.

Without any biblical perspective, history confirms the ability of deceit-filled eloquence to entice weak men to murder, married women to stray, prideful men to war and so-called peace-loving folk to slaughter.

On a daily basis, a reckless tongue can sear forever the spirit of an innocent child, a wanting spouse, a true friend or a caring co-worker. Evil oratory moves men and women to do evil things. But oh, how powerful, how wonderful is a well-intentioned 'thank you', a sincere 'I'm sorry' or a genuine 'I believe in you.'

James 3:10 tells us that the tongue wields the power of life and death. Having been the target of ill-intended criticism, and out of momentary anger or hurt having tried to destroy the souls of many I held dear, I know first-hand that James is so right.

I have been trying to correct this character flaw by being as deliberately uplifting as possible, thinking of myself as a vessel of the living God first before I speak and remembering that man was made in God's own image and cursing any man is tantamount to cursing God.

Could it be that James 1:26 holds a key to salvation? "...If anyone considers himself religious and yet does not keep a rein on his tongue, he deceives himself and his religion is worthless..." I submit to you that if you compare the words of Jesus Christ to any demagogue, you will find that Jesus' words repulse with great power all hatred, gossip, rumor and even innuendo. It is impossible to claim to love God without loving Jesus as the living Word of God. Saying so merely confirms the truth in this case that the spoken Word will indeed set one free.

"Reckless words pierce like a sword but the tongue of the wise brings healing." Proverbs 12:14. I'm told God hates a liar and loves the truth. Remember there is no cure for hurt feelings except an honest spoken apology. Hurt feelings fester and infect a person.

Think before you speak. And please don't take my word for it. "He who guards his lips, guards his life, but he who speaks rashly will come to ruin." Proverbs 12:3.

May God bless and keep you always.

An Atlanta Democrat sometimes called the "conscience of the Congress," Lewis is known for the prominent role he had in the 1960s civil rights struggles.

Lewis turned to politics in 1981, when he was elected to the Atlanta City Council. He won a seat in Congress in 1986 and has spent much of his career in the minority.

Garrett future murky as Cowboys beat Redskins, miss playoffs

By SCHUYLER DIXON

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) Jason Garrett lost himself in a couple of long anecdotes during a reflective session with reporters after what could have been his last game as coach of the Dallas Cowboys.

When asked whether he expected to return for a 10th full year in 2020 with his contract expiring at the end of an underachieving season for Dallas, Garrett got right to the point.

"I have no idea," the coach said Sunday after the Cowboys beat Washington 47-16 behind four touchdown passes from Dak Prescott but were eliminated from the playoffs thanks to Philadelphia's victory over the New York Giants.

Phillips was fired, Garrett said, "I want to be the coach of the Dallas Cowboys, but we'll see what happens."

Dallas could have made the playoffs without a winning record for the third time in franchise history. Instead, the Eagles won the division for the second time in three years by beating the Giants 34-17.

as the Redskins (3-13) secured the No. 2 pick in the draft in what could be their final game under interim coach Bill Callahan.

The former Dallas assistant replaced Jay Gruden, fired in October with Washington at 0-5. Monday with the former Carolina coach, who also was fired this season.

Ezekiel Elliott, who helped fuel Super Bowl hopes by signing a $90 million extension to end a long holdout days before the opener, and a 13-yard scoring catch.

The Cowboys won their first three games after the two-time rushing champion signed the big contract, but lost eight of the next 12 to put their postseason fate in the hands of the Eagles.

Elliott had 122 yards rushing to finish with 1,357. It's the first time he has played a full season without leading the NFL in rushing.

Dallas was hoping to build on the first playoff win for Prescott and Elliott last season before a divisional-round loss to the Los Angeles Rams that ended the club's 23rd consecutive season without reaching the NFC championship game.

Now that number is at 24 and counting.

"Just that we didn't get the job done," Elliott said of his biggest disappointment. "We're not in the playoffs. We lost some games we should've won. We weren't good enough."

Dallas (8-8) lost control of its postseason fate with a 17-9 loss to the Eagles last week.

Now the fate of Garrett is in the hands of owner Jerry Jones, who turned aside numerous attempts to offer a timeframe on a decision, essentially saying any of those questions imply that he's made a decision when perhaps there isn't even a decision to make.

"I don't have a shareable timetable," Jones said. "The proper question here is: 'Do I have anything that I would share as far as my timetable, my thoughts or any work that I've done, we've done, any work preparing for the future?' All of that I would not comment on or share at this time."

It's the fourth time Dallas has finished .500 under Garrett, whose career record is 87-70, including a 2-3 playoff mark. The first three 8-8 records ran consecutively in his first three full seasons from 2011-13, with the Cowboys losing the finale each time when a win would have put them in the playoffs.

"Oh, absolutely," Garrett said when asked if he still had more coaching to do in the NFL.

Asked if he wanted to remain in the job he's held since the middle of the 2010 season when Wade

"The thing that I know is that this team, this group of guys, this record is not indicative of the type of locker room this is, and the type of talent I think that we had," said Keenum, who was 18 of 37 for 206 yards, with an early interception. "You can see there's a lot of different things that you could point your finger at. I'm going to point my finger at myself."

Three of Prescott's TD passes went to Michael Gallup as the fourth-year quarterback fell 1 yard short of Tony Romo's club record of 4,903 yards passing in a season.

About the time the Cowboys put away the Redskins on Prescott's second TD pass to Gallup for a 37-16 lead late in the third quarter, Philadelphia went up 10 with a TD after the Giants lost a fumble at their 2-yard line.

"I don't know if I've ever been disappointed after a win, to be honest with you. But that was tonight," Prescott said. He was 23 of 33 for 303 yards in his second straight game playing with a sprained right shoulder, looking much better than he did in the loss to Philadelphia.

In Gallup's first career game with multiple touchdowns, the second-year player had five catches for 98 yards.

PETERSON WATCH

Washington's Adrian Peterson, fifth on the career rushing list, had a 32-yard run to set up a second-half field goal and finished with 78 yards to put his total at 14,216 in his 13th season. The club has a 2020 option on the 34year-old's contract.

INJURIES

Redskins: DB Maurice Smith was ruled out with a concussion after being taken off the field on a cart in the first quarter. ... Leading receiver Terry McLaurin, a rookie, had already been ruled out with a concussion.

Cowboys: CB Byron Jones missed a game for the first time in his career after injuring an ankle at practice during the week. ... Seventime Pro Bowl LT Tyron Smith was out because of a back injury. It's the fourth consecutive season that Smith has missed three games. ... DE DeMarcus Lawrence was sidelined early by a rib injury and later ruled out with a back issue.

UP NEXT

The season is over for both teams.

On Monday, December 23, U.S. District Judge Barbara Lynn dismissed the city from a civil lawsuit that the family of Botham Jean brought after Amber Guyger killed the 26-year-old.

The ruling leaves the 31year-old former officer as the sole defendant in the suit, which argues she used excessive force and that better police training could have prevented Jean's death. It makes a substantial financial settlement unlikely.

In her brief ruling, Lynn wrote that she was upholding a magistrate judge's decision and dismissing the city because the suit failed "to state a claim upon which relief can be granted."

Guyger was found guilty of murder for Jean's death and sentenced to a decade in October. She testified at trial that she mistook Jean's apartment for her own on the floor below and thought he was an intruder.

Jean, an accountant from the Caribbean island nation of St. Lucia, had been eating a bowl of ice cream when Guyger entered his home and shot him.

His death drew national attention for its unusual circumstances and as one of several prominent killings of black men by white police officers.

A lawyer for Jean's family did not immediately respond to a request for comment Thursday.

returned fire and fatally shot a gunman who killed at least Freeway Church of Christ one person in a church near Fort Worth, Texas, on Sunday, police said.

A second parishioner has life-threatening injuries following the attack at the West Freeway Church of Christ, White Settlement Police Department Chief J.P. Bevering said during a news conference Sunday afternoon.

The assailant fired at least once before the "heroic actions" of the congregants cut his assault short, Bevering said.

"Unfortunately, this country has seen so many of these that we've actually gotten used to it at this point. And it's tragic and it's a terrible situation, especially during the holiday season," Jeoff Williams, a regional director with the Texas Department of Public Safety, said at the news conference. "I would like to point out that we have a couple of heroic parishioners who stopped short of just anything that you can even imagine, saved countless lives, and our hearts are going out to them and their families as well."

Authorities have released scant details about the victims, the shooter and what led to the attack.

An elder at the church told the that one of those killed was a security guard who responded to the shooter, calling him a dear friend.

"He was trying to do what he needed to do to protect the rest of us," said the elder, Mike Tinius.

"It's extremely upsetting

In a livestream of the church service, the gunman can be seen getting up from a pew and talking to someone at the back of the church before pulling out a gun and opening fire. Parishioners can then be heard screaming and seen ducking under pews or running as papers fly to the floor.

More than 100 people, including children, can be seen sitting in the pews from the livestream's viewpoint.

Two people with minor injuries sustained while ducking for cover were treated at the scene, MedStar Mobile Healthcare spokeswoman Macara Trusty said.

Gov. Greg Abbott asked the state to pray for the victims, their loved ones and the community of White Settlement, about 8 miles (12 kilometers) west of Fort Worth.

"Places of worship are meant to be sacred, and I am grateful for the church members who acted quickly to take down the shooter and help prevent further loss of life," Abbott said in a tweeted statement.

It is not the first deadly shooting to take place at a church in Texas. In November 2017, Devin Patrick Kelley opened fire on the congregation at a church in Sutherland Springs, Texas, killing more than two dozen worshippers, before taking his own life.

Jones said Gibson Publishing, which owns the paper, has not provided details on the future to the staff.

Meanwhile, the state's oldest weekly newspaper covering two rural counties northeast of Sacramento appears to be nearing its final days.

The Mountain Messenger's editor-publisher told The Los Angeles Times he is planning to retire by the middle of January, at which point publication will end. Don Russell said he spent the past year trying to sell the paper but he hasn't received any offers.

The paper began in 1853 as a twice-per-month publication; its claim to fame is that Mark Twain once wrote there under his real name, Sam Clemens, while hiding out from the law. Known around the area as the "Mountain Mess," the paper covered school board meetings, federal land use and other issues in rural Sierra and Plumas counties.

Lee Adams, a Sierra County supervisor, told the Times his family has subscribed to the paper since the 1970s.

"It has chronicled our history for 166 years, and to see it disappear now is just quite sad," Adams said. "This is more than a newspaper, it really is an institution."

Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) could lead to greatly enhanced investment in low- and moderate-income (LMI) communities around the country, according to Grovetta N. Gardineer, senior deputy comptroller for Bank Supervision Policy with the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC).

The OCC is soliciting comments on a proposal to modernize the CRA by clarifying what counts, updating where activity counts, measuring performance more objectively, and making reporting more timely and transparent.

"The CRA has a very noble goal of making sure banks meet their responsibility for lending, investing in and servicing communities where they do business, with a focus on lowand moderate-income individuals and areas," Gardineer said. "The statute remains a noble goal, but the implementation is outdated and, in many ways, ineffective."

The CRA was enacted in 1977 as a direct response to redlining, an unethical practice whereby banks and other lending institutions made it extremely difficult, if not impossible, for residents of poor, innercity communities to borrow money, get a mortgage, take out insurance or not have the internet in 1977, and interstate branching was not available.

"Banks were limited to where they had branches or where their home office was located, so they had a completely geographical approach," she continued. "With all of the trementechnological dous advancements in recent years, banks now offer products and services across the country regardless of geography."

The OCC hopes stakeholders will carefully the review proposed changes and submit comments so that a final rule can be issued in the first half of 2020.

Noting that the new CRA rules would fight displacement and harmful gentrification - a high priority in many minority communities – Gardineer points out that the OCC is making a concerted effort to work closely with such organizations as the NAACP and the National Urban League.

To that end, OCC has invested the time to meet

Meetings are currently scheduled with Derrick Johnson, president and CEO of the NAACP, and Marc Morial, president and CEO of the National Urban League. Another recent outreach effort to solicit public input included an Atlanta bus tour with Ambassador Andrew Young.

There are still too many underserved communities in the U.S. that are "CRA desserts," Gardiner notes. "No matter what their geographical footprint, we want banks to be able to offer a broad array of services to communities and individuals throughout the nation.

"Given the wide spectrum of individuals who we know will benefit from this rule making process," Gardiner said, "it is particularly important to the Comptroller to make sure that we spread a wide net, that we make ourselves available and that we share our vision.

"We have really worked hard over the past two years," she concluded, "closing a loophole that allowed wealthy people to get CRA credit for investing in LMI areas. That is not what CRA was ever intended to do. And that is being directly responsive to some of the feedback we have been receiving."
