MAYWEATHER WINS DECISION IN RICHEST FIGHT EVER

most of the fight. But he was never able to land a sustained volume of punches, as Mayweather worked his defensive wizardry again.

Two ringside judges scored the fight 116-112, while the third had it 118-110. The Associated Press had Mayweather ahead 115-113.

"I take my hat off to Manny Pacquiao. I see now why he is at the pinnacle of boxing," Mayweather said. "I knew he was going to push me, win some rounds. I wasn't being hit with a lot of shots until I sit in a pocket and he landed a lot of shots."

The bout wasn't an artistic triumph for either fighter, with long periods where both men fought cautiously.

Pacquiao threw far fewer punches than he normally does in a fight, with Mayweather actually throwing more.

That was largely because Pacquiao didn't throw his right hand often. Promoter Bob Arum said Pacquiao injured his shoulder sometime after March 11.

The Dallas Post Tribune honors all mothers! The mothers in this 2015 Mother's Day issue were selected on a first come, first serve basis.

A Mother's Love

A mother's love cannot be explained.

It's a love that never wavers,

Enduring both sunshine and rain.

A mother's love bears all things,

And always seeks the best.

It's a love that is enduring

A love that surpasses all the rest.

Even when the world condemns

And fails to see the good,

A mother's love lifts up a prayer

That her child be understood.

A mother's love is a mystery

That man can never understand,

A love that encourages her child

To cling to God's unchanging hand!

Happy Mother's Day!

Cinco de Mayo

BY CONGRESSWOMAN
EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON

As a nation of immigrants it is important that we acknowledge and celebrate the history and contributions of all of those who live in our country. Each year, on the 5th of May, those who trace their ancestral home to Mexico recall a crucial event in the life of that nation.

On that day in 1862 in the southern coastal city of Puebla, an outnumbered Mexican Army decisively defeated French troops under orders from their commander, Napoleon III, to invade and conquer Mexico. The defeat of the French troops was a monumental victory for Mexico.

According to a number of noted historians, if the French had not been defeated at Puebla they would have joined forces with the Confederate Army in their war against the Union. In fact, some historians argue that the defeat of the French by Mexican troops led directly to the Union Army's victories at the battles of Gettysburg in Pennsylvania and Vicksburg in Mississippi. President Lincoln would not have been able to sign the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863 if the French had been victorious, they say.

On Cinco de Mayo exuberant celebrations will take place in North America and in countries throughout the world where large numbers of people with Mexican roots live and work. There will be parades, concerts, lectures, worship services and carnivals. In some school districts in North Texas, school children of all races will wear traditional Mexican dress to class and perform traditional Mexican dances.

And while Cinco de Mayo will be a great day of celebration, we must never forget the historical significance of the event and how it changed the history of this nation and its people. We must be mindful that it is not simply a day for those with ties to Mexico to celebrate, but is one in which all people can find meaning.

I wish everyone a very happy Cinco de Mayo. I am hopeful that all of us will understand its rich meaning and appreciate the wonderful legacy that it represents for all Americans.

Evil

Evil is the work of the devil, Evil lives inside of very unhappy people.

Evil will cause you to do bad devilish things toward your family, Friends, and neighbors to be jealous of each other.

Evil causes anger, Fighting, Killings, and world wars.

Evil causes people to say hurting words to each other.

Evil is another word for HATE!

Evil is just another name for satan.

A Little Bit of Faith: Let Your Light Shine

BY COLLEEN WHITE

"Pursue peace with all people, and holiness, without which no one will see the Lord!"

(Hebrews 12:14). This scripture speaks to the core of who we are as Christians. It seems as if it's too much for us, but it's not. If we say that we follow Jesus Christ, then this is what is expected of us. We should be the first ones seeking out peace when situations appear to be chaotic. Why? Well, we want our society to get a glimpse of Christ living in us.

Then the next question to ask is, "What is holiness?" This means that we are separated unto God therefore, living in us.

Therefore we must remember that as believers in Christ, we are "the light of the world." Our light should not be hidden. We should let our light shine before people so that they will see our good works that are done in Jesus' name. Can you let your light shine this week? I know I will.

Amen? Amen.

"THE PSALMIST'S CONFIDENCE IN GOD, HIS REFUGE

REV. JOHNNY C. SMITH,
PASTOR – MOUNT MORIAH
MISSIONARY BAPTIST CHURCH

Psalm 91 has been labeled as messianic, a psalm portraying the wonderful life of Christ. The message of this psalm is that the believer has security and protection only in God. No matter how extreme the test of a believer may be, he or she has safety only in the protection that God offers. From a salvation perspective, we have eternal safety and security only in Jesus Christ, for St. John 14:6 states, "Jesus saith unto him (Thomas), I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." Yes, eternal security is found only in God's Son, for St. John 10:28-29 says, "And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand."

In verses 1-2, the psalmist unfolds his confidence in the fact that security and protection is found only in trusting in the most High God. In fact, the Lord is the believer's only means of security and he is constantly being protected by God. The source of the psalmist's trust is the Lord, as he states, "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the LORD, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in Him will I trust."

Any believer whose trust is in the Lord, will experience God's peace, regardless of his plight, for Isaiah 26:3 states,

May God Bless!

New AG Meets with Baltimore Leaders, Police and Activists

BY FREDDIE ALLEN
NNPA SENIOR
WASHINGTON
CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON (NNPA) - Keeping her promise to ensure, "both strength and fairness, for the protection of both the needs of victims and the rights of all" in the criminal justice system, Attorney General Loretta Lynch traveled to Baltimore Tuesday to meet with city officials, law enforcement and community stakeholders to encourage closer ties between police and the residents that are sworn to protect.

The same day Lynch was sworn-in and just a few hours after Freddie Gray's funeral, dozens of people, most described as teenagers and students, looted shoe stores and burned local businesses and police vehicles. On April 12, Gray, a 25 year-old Black man, was chased and arrested by police officers. While in police custody, Gray suffered a severed spinal cord and a crushed voice box and died a week later. Gray's death and viral cell phone footage of his encounter with police, sparked nationwide protests.

Last week, the Justice Department dispatched Vanita Gupta, the head of the Civil Rights Division, and Ronald Davis, the director of Community Oriented Policing Services, to Baltimore for a series of meetings with faith and civic leaders and community stakeholders to discuss the best path forward to mend the fractured relationship between Baltimore's police force and the majority Black communities that they serve in city's poorest neighborhoods.

On Friday, Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby filed charges against six Baltimore police officers that ranged from second-degree assault to "depraved heart murder."

During a meeting with Maryland United States Senators Barbara Mikulski (D) and Ben Cardin (D) and Congressmen Elijah Cummings, John Sarbanes and Dutch Ruppersberger, Lynch said it was inspiring to see people come together to reclaim the city.

"We're here to hold your hands and provide support," said Lynch to the group that also included William H. "Billy" Murphy Jr., the Gray family's attorney, and Rev. Donte L. Hickman, Sr., the pastor of Southern Baptist Church, whose community resource center and senior housing complex were destroyed by fire while still under construction during the riots on April 27. She also vowed that the Justice Department was there to help the city move forward and work to improve the Baltimore Police Department (B.P.D.).

Lynch then met with Police Commissioner Anthony Batts privately and then with a small group of police officers who she called the "the hardest-working police officers in America."

Lynch added: "To all of you on the front lines, I want to thank you. You really have become the face of law enforcement."

Last fall, the Justice Department partnered with Baltimore officials to address concerns about abuse in the city's police department.

"I have worked on this issue for years," said Stephanie Rawlings-Blake, the mayor of Baltimore. "We can't afford to fail. The relationship between police and the community is like a marriage."

Lynch also met with Baltimore United, a community group that advocates for police reform, and others who had lost loved ones to police violence.

Earlier this year, President Barack Obama's Task Force on 21st Century Policing made a number of recommendations that included encouraging law enforcement officials to "establish a culture of transparency and accountability in order to build public trust and legitimacy" and to design "comprehensive policies that include training, investigations, prosecutions, data collection, and information sharing."

The report also recommended that police, "acknowledge the role of policing in past and present injustice and discrimination and how it is a hurdle to the promotion of community trust."

But the letter from Gene Ryan, the president of the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge #3 in Baltimore, to Mosby may produce another hurdle to building community trust there. Ryan wrote that "none of the officers are involved are responsible for the death of Mr. Gray" and that Mosby should recuse herself from the case, because Murphy, the Gray family's attorney, donated to her campaign and worked on her transition team.

Lawyers for Edward Nero, the Baltimore police officer who was charged with police misconduct, second-degree assault and false imprisonment, filed a motion to get a closer look at the knife officer's found on Gray. City and state codes both contain language that say switchblades that open automatically, with some pressure applied to a button or spring, are illegal.

Rep. G.K. Butterfield (D-N.C.), chair of the Congressional Black Caucus, wrote a letter to Ryan calling his request for a special prosecutor in the case "illogical and unfounded in the law."

Butterfield continued: "You have damaged the good reputation of your organization in writing the letter, releasing it to the media, and making accusations that amount to nothing more than propaganda intended to interfere with the proper administration of justice."

Are You Raising One of the Next Generation of Hoodlums: Son to Mother

Dr. Joyce Willard Teal

Mothers' Day is a special day when we celebrate our mothers, those who are yet alive as well as those who have passed on. Those of us who know we had good mothers still honor them with fond memories that even time can't erase. But for the boys who are currently being raised by their mothers, this is a perfect time to let Mothers know that you are listening when they teach, and that they are not raising one of the next generation of hoodlums. The following letter is one a boy could present to his mother to let her know that her teaching is not in vain:

Dear Mother,

I know that there are times when you talk to me that you feel that what you are saying goes in one ear and out the other. But I want you to know that I hear you. Not only do I hear you, but I take seriously what you say to me. I know you love me and want only what is best for me. I love you too and want to please you with my actions today and with the man that I become tomorrow.

You probably think that I am unaware of all the sacrifices you make for me. But I want you to know that I am aware of them, probably not all of them, but certainly many of them. I also want you to know that I appreciate all that you have done and all that you do for me.

I know you want me to be happy and that you do a lot to make me happy. Please know that I want you to be happy too. You do many things to assure my happiness, and I want to do everything that I can to make you happy. I know that whenever I do good, you are happy. And I promise you I will try my best to do good, always. I will study hard and make good grades in school. I will behave respectfully to my teachers and other elders. I will choose friends who encourage me to stay out of trouble. I will honor the curfew you have set for me. I will go to church and Sunday School without complaining, and when I am there, I will pay attention to what is being taught, as you have reminded me to do so many times. I will be polite, and I will say please and thank you when I should.

Mama, I know you want me to become a man that you can be proud of, and I promise that I will make you proud of me. I promise that you are not raising one of the next generation of hoodlums!

Happy Mother's Day!

Hurt And Pain

So much hurt and pain in the world.
People Are Crying for help.
Our hearts are hurting.
Somebody please Help!
Stop this outrage of Violence!
Stop the Racism!
Stop the Fighting!
Stop the Wars!
Stop saying all these words of hate for each other.
What we need to do about our situation is prayer.
Let's come together and pray.
Let's come together and put a stop to all the hurt and pain.

Arum said Pacquiao's camp thought he would be allowed the anti-inflammatory shot because he had gotten them during training and they had been approved by the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency. But he said paperwork filed with the commission didn't check the injury box, and the Nevada commission ruled against the request for a shot.

"The ruling made tonight affected the outcome of the fight," Arum said. Nevada Athletic Commission chairman Francisco Aguilar said Pacquiao's camp wanted shots that included lidocaine, a drug that numbs the affected area. But he said Pacquiao's representatives didn't check the injury box after the weigh-in Friday, and the commission had no way of knowing how serious the injury was or what it could be treated with.

"I have no proof an injury actually exists and I can't make a ruling based on what they're telling me," Aguilar said.

Still, Pacquiao thought he had won the bout, largely on the basis of a few left hands that seemed to shake Mayweather.

"I thought I won the fight. He didn't do nothing except move outside," Pacquiao said. "I got him many times."

There were no knockdowns, and neither fighter seemed terribly hurt at any time. Pacquiao landed probably the biggest punch in the fight in the fourth round - a left hand that sent Mayweather into the ropes - but he wasn't able to consistently land against the elusive champion.

The fight was a chess match, with Mayweather using his jab to keep Pacquiao away most of the fight. Pacquiao tried to force the action, but Mayweather was often out of his reach by the time he found his way inside.

"He's a very awkward fighter, so I had to take my time and watch him close," Mayweather said.

Mayweather fought confidently in the late rounds, winning the last two rounds on all three scorecards. In the final seconds of the fight he raised his right hand in victory and after the bell rang stood on the ropes, pounding his heart with his gloves.

"You're tough," he said to Pacquiao, hugging him in the ring.

It was vintage Mayweather, even if it didn't please the crowd of 16,507. They cheered every time Pacquiao threw a punch, hoping that he would land a big shot and become the first fighter to beat Mayweather.

But a good percentage of what he threw never landed. Mayweather often came back with straight right hands, then moved away before Pacquiao could respond.

"I thought we pulled it out," Pacquiao trainer Freddie Roach said. "I asked my man to throw more combinations between rounds. I thought he fought flat-footed too many times."

Ringside punch stats showed Mayweather landing 148 punches of 435, while Pacquiao landed 81 of 429. The volume for Pacquiao was a lot lower than the 700 or more he usually throws.

Five years in the making, the fight unfolded before a glittering crowd of celebrities, high rollers and people who had enough money to pay for ringside seats going for $40,000 and up. Before it did, though, it was delayed about a half hour because cable and satellite systems were having trouble keeping up with the pay-per-view demand.

They paid big money to watch two superstars fight for their legacies - and in Pacquiao's case his country - in addition to the staggering paydays for both.

Pacquiao had vowed to take the fight to Mayweather and force him into a war. His camp thought Mayweather's 38-year-old legs weren't what they once were.

"He is moving around, not easy to throw punches when people moving around," Pacquiao said. "When he stayed, I threw a lot of punches. That's a fight."

But Mayweather moved well. His only real moment of trouble came in the fourth round when Pacquiao landed his left hand and then flurried to Mayweather's head on the ropes, but he escaped and shook his head at Pacquiao as if to say he wasn't hurt.

In the corner, Mayweather's father, Floyd Sr. kept yelling at his son to do more. But Mayweather was content to stick with what was working and not take a risk that could cost him the fight.

"I'm a calculated fighter, he is a tough competitor," Mayweather said. "My dad wanted me to do more but Pacquiao is an awkward fighter."

Mayweather said that his fight in September against a yet-to-be-determined opponent would be his last.

"I'm almost 40 years old now. I've been in the sport 19 years and have been a champion for 18 years. I'm truly blessed."

Mayweather is also very rich, getting 60 percent of the approximately $300 million purse, depending on pay-per-view sales. The live gate alone was more than $70 million, and the bout was expected to easily smash the pay-per-view record of 2.48 million buys set in 2007 when Mayweather fought Oscar De La Hoya.

But while the frenzy over the fight pushed up tickets to 3-4 times their retail price the week of the fight, prices dropped dramatically as the fight neared and some tickets were being resold for less than face value.

Boxing fans called for the fight to be made five years ago, when both men were in their undisputed prime. But squabbles over promoters, drug testing and a variety of other issues sidelined it until Pacquiao beat Chris Algieri in November and immediately launched a campaign to get the fight made.

When they finally got it, it wasn't the fight it might have been five years ago. But it was enough to settle the question that boxing fans had asked for years - who would win the big welterweight matchup of the best fighters of their time.

Local Husband and Wife Team Wins Event In Austin

Eastside Tennis Doubles Championships

During the weekend of April 4/17/2015 thru 4/19/2015, the First Annual Eastside Doubles Championship was held in Austin, Texas at the Austin Tennis Center. The event drew doubles teams from most of the major cities in the Southwestern section, mainly Houston, Dallas, Austin, and Little Rock, Arkansas that participated in the men's, women's, and mixed 3.5 and 4.0 levels.

The Husband and Wife team, Errol and Garretta Saunders of Dallas, Texas, won the 3.5 Mixed Doubles event after a hard week of practice just for the event, combined with many years of experience playing together as teams over the years. Errol and Garretta are dedicated to the game of tennis, play in local, state, and national events, and serve as co-captains of the Kiest Racquetteers, a mixed doubles team that competes in the Tennis Competitors of Dallas (TCD) tennis league. As co-captains, they work throughout the year, providing special practice sessions, social events, and special gatherings to help the team advance to a higher level.
