Black Youth Get Summer Jobs Boost

By Freddie Allen
NNPA Senior Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NNPA) - Black youth experienced bigger employment gains over the summer than White and Hispanic youth, according to analyses by Valerie Wilson of the Economic Policy Institute, a nonpartisan think tank focused on low- and middle-income workers.

Wilson, the director of the Program on Race, Ethnicity, and the Economy at EPI, studied the seasonally unadjusted jobs numbers from June, July and August and discovered that Black youth (16-19 years-old) showed the largest gains among young people in employment-to-population ratio (EPOP), the share of the population that is employed, and the labor force participation rate, the measure of workers that either have jobs or that are still looking for one, compared to last summer.

In a blog post on summer youth employment for EPI's website, Wilson wrote that, "Summer employment was up 2.5 percentage points for Black teens, compared to a 1.5 percentage point increase for Hispanic youth and a 1.2 percentage point increase for White teens."

Wilson said that the summer youth employment numbers are higher in general because the economy is doing better, but Black and Latino youth might have been more motivated to look for jobs by tough financial conditions at home.

"African American and Latino families were the hardest hit during the recession and had less wealth to fall back on," said Wilson. "African American and Latino youth may have more of an incentive to get into the labor market and to find jobs so that they can contribute to their families."

The summer labor force participation rates for Black and Latino youth bottomed out around 2010, Wilson said and have been increasing throughout the recovery. The summer labor force participation rate for White youth, however, flattened over the same period of time. In 2010, the summer participation rate for White youth was 43.8 percent. By 2015 that rate had fallen to 42 percent. For Black youth, the summer labor force participation rate was 29 percent in 2010 and increased to 33 percent in 2015.

Even though the Black unemployment rate increased from 9.1 percent in July to 9.5 percent in August, the labor force participation rate also edged up from 61.5 percent in July to 61.7 percent in August signaling that more Blacks were optimistic about finding work last month.

In recent weeks, growth on the U.S. and Chinese stock markets has sputtered as some investors speculate that the Federal Reserve may begin to raise interest rates later this month in attempt to guard against inflation.

Wilson said that the Federal Reserve has a dual mandate.

"On one hand they are charged with keeping unemployment low and on the other hand the [Federal Reserve] is tasked with keeping inflation low," said Wilson, adding that the interest rate on borrowing money is used to balance those two economic indicators.

The national unemployment rate fell from 5.3 percent in July to 5.1 percent in August and the economy added 173,000. Wilson said that broader measures like the EPOP, labor force participation rate, and prime age employment show that the economy still hasn't fully recovered.

"Even though the unemployment rate is looking better, there is still a lot of slack in the labor market," said Wilson.

Many economists, like Wilson, believe that the economy is still too weak to cause serious concerns about inflation. Sluggish wage growth continues to keep workers from getting ahead.

Wilson said that specific policies like raising the minimum wage and revising the overtime rules for certain workers can help to spur wage growth.

According to EPI, from 1979 to 2013 worker productivity increased by 64.9 percent, but hourly wages for the median worker only increased 6.1 percent over the same time period.

In a statement on the August jobs report, Representative Bobby Scott (D-Va.) said that the economy continues to recover from the worst financial crisis in a generation, but there is still more work to do.

"For example, we must enact the Raise the Wage Act, which will increase the minimum wage and put more money in the pockets of hardworking Americans," said Scott. "That legislation will help us continue down the road of economic recovery."

The Value of Labor

By Marc H. Morial
NNPA Columnist

"It is necessary to reaffirm that employment is necessary for society, for families and for individuals. Its primary value is the good of the human person, as it allows the individual to be fully realised…Therefore, it follows that work has not only the economic objective of profit, but above all a purpose that regards man and his dignity. And if there is no work, this dignity is wounded. Indeed, the unemployed and underemployed risk being relegated to the margins of society, becoming victims of social exclusion."

- Pope Francis, March 20, 2014

Despite the dizzying array of clearance sales and bargains to be found in our nation's malls and department stores, Labor Day is no creation of our retail industry. It is our nation's annual tribute to the working class, American worker whose physical, and largely manual labor, built this country's infrastructure and built a labor movement that spurred social and economic achievements for all American workers - regardless of job sector.

As we celebrate labor and America's slow but steady climb to newfound economic prosperity during its most sustained period of job creation this century, we discover a dark cloud inside the silver lining of our recovery: the prosperity of the American economy is not being shared equally. Too many people are working harder, but are falling further behind. Too many people remain at the distant margins of the job market - particularly in our communities of color, where unemployment remains at crisis level, even as our economy continues to rebound.

The unemployment rate in our country currently sits at 5.3 percent, its lowest rate since May 2008. But take a deeper dive into those numbers and the tale of two recoveries is clear and unmistakable. While the unemployment rate for Whites is at 4.6 percent, the Hispanic unemployment rate is at 6.8 percent and the Black unemployment rate is 9.1 percent - double that of White job seekers. The unemployment rates for Blacks and Hispanics are nothing if not discouraging and telling. These communities, especially hard hit during the last recession, are not benefiting from our economy's rebound.

The ability to secure work that provides a fair, living wage - regardless of gender - is an asset to the worker, the worker's family, neighborhood, community, and ultimately, our nation. We are an immensely stronger America when access to work is not excluded to some, but rather, extended to all.

That is why the National Urban League has proposed a 12-point Blueprint for Quality Job Creation. Our plan offers a dozen dynamic and imaginative measures to benefit those most profoundly affected by recession but left out of the ensuing recovery, while also remedying many of the underlying causes behind the recession's inordinate and amplified impact on the communities we serve:

•Restore the Summer Youth Jobs Program as a stand-alone program;

•Create 100 Urban Jobs Academies to implement an expansion of the Urban Youth Empowerment Program;

•Develop a dynamic, national public-private jobs initiative to create jobs, train urban residents and stimulate economic growth in the areas of technology and broadband, health care, manufacturing, transportation, public infrastructure and clean energy;

•Boost minority participation in information and communication technology industries;

•Reform, revise and reauthorize the Workforce Investment Act to prepare and retrain workers for 21st century jobs;

•Create Green Empowerment Zones;

•Expand small business lending;

•Initiate tax reform that reduces rates across the board and eliminates tax loopholes;

•Establish and promote multilateral international trade policies that expand the market for American goods and services;

•Enact the Urban Jobs Act (H.R. 5708);

•Expand the hiring of housing counselors nationwide; and

•Fund direct job creation in cities and states.

We continue to urge Congress and the White House to adopt these measures without delay. The standard of living many of us take for granted today was won for us through the determination and organized protests of the American worker. The solidarity of the workers of the past must be reborn in our political discourse today as we collectively strive to open blocked pathways to work, success and the American dream of economic mobility. We must all work together - individuals, politicians and corporations - to ensure the possibility of work for fair wages for all who seek it.

Marc H. Morial, former mayor of New Orleans, is president and CEO of the National Urban League.

A Little Bit of Faith: God Has a Plan

By Colleen White

Have you ever wondered if God has a plan for your life? Well, He does. In the book of Jeremiah He talks about how His desire is to see us do well. It says, "For I know the plans I have for you," declares the Lord, "plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future," (Jeremiah 29:11). The key words are "hope and a future." God always wants us to be hopeful about our lives; He also wants us to move toward a meaningful future. Without having hope, we lack the ability to believe that things will get better. Without a future, there is nothing for us to strive for.

We must believe, and have faith, in God knowing that we can be hopeful for things to come in our lives. We should also look toward the future. Our future rests in God's love, compassion, and mercy for us. Without having either of these it is difficult for us to believe that our situations will get better. It also means that we are totally depending on ourselves and our own understanding and not God.

God's attention span for us can't be measured. He knows what our needs are before we do. This is why it's difficult for us to remain down about our situations, because when we have Christ in our corner, our situation can be turned around in an instant. This is why we should never give up hope.

So the next time you're feeling like there is no bluebook for your life, grab your Bible and read Jeremiah 29:11. You'll see He has a plan for your life and His plan is bigger and brighter than you could ever comprehend. His bluebook is the best plan for your life. He will never leave you nor forsake you. Our Heavenly Father is always right on time. Our ways are not His way, but He is always thinking of our needs and desires. For He knows which plan is best for our lives. Amen? Amen.

"THE BOLD PREACHING OF PETER ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST" ACTS 2:14-35

REV. JOHNNY C. SMITH,
PASTOR – MOUNT MORIAH
MISSIONARY BAPTIST CHURCH

Peter, really a coward before the cross because he denied his Lord, is now standing boldly and answers the critics' attack of mockery in saying that the believers at Pentecost were drunk on new wine. Acts 2:14-15 states, "But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judaea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words: For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day."

Notice quickly that Peter is the main speaker on the day of Pentecost, but he is supported by the other eleven apostles. Dr. Luke mentions the fact that there were eleven apostles who stood with Peter; thus, Dr. Luke considers that fact that Matthias was the replacement for the vacant apostolic position of Judas Iscariot, not the apostle Paul (Acts 6:2; Matthew 19:28). As a further answer for these unbelieving critics at Pentecost, he even quotes from their scripture that says, "But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel" (v. 16). Peter is not stating that Joel's prophecy was being fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. However, based on Joel's prophecy that will be fulfilled during the Millennium Kingdom, these critics should not think that the phenomenal operation of the Spirit was something strange. Peter goes on to quote to these critics in verses 17-21 that there was a great outpouring of God's Spirit and that fact should not be strange to them based on Joel's prophecy.

According to verses 22-35, Peter continues his preaching to this audience explaining that Jesus of Nazareth was indeed the Christ who they crucified (vv. 22-24). Peter related to these Jewish leaders that they were responsible for the crucifixion of Jesus. These leaders were to be blamed for delivering Jesus over to the Roman government to be crucified on a cross of shame. Although the religious leaders plotted the death of Christ, it was a part of God's program that He would be slain and rise again for verses 23-24 say, "Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain: Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that He should be holden of it."

Peter even related that Christ would be raised from the dead, quoting from Psalm 16:8-11 to prove it (vv. 25-31). Again, Psalm 16 is a prediction of the resurrection of Christ, for David, the one speaking in that psalm was still in the grave.

In verses 32-35, Peter supports his argument for Christ's resurrection by citing proofs of it and he also related that Jesus is exalted, for He is seated at the right hand of God. In conclusion, Peter boldly preached the resurrection of Christ with power and conviction; and we too must declare that same message with power, conviction and love as we serve this present age.

May God Bless!

My position On The Iran Agreement

By Congresswoman Eddie Bernice Johnson

After careful consideration I am in full support of the historical nuclear weapons agreement between the United States, China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom, Germany and Iran. The agreement is in the best interests of our country, our major allies in the Middle East, and the global community.

The agreement, which will face Congressional scrutiny, has won support from more than one hundred former American diplomats. These experienced Republicans and Democrats describe the deal, negotiated by Secretary of State John Kerry and Secretary of Energy Dr. Ernest J. Moniz, as a "landmark agreement." It would be irresponsible to reject this diplomatic movement towards stability and peace.

"Once properly implemented, this comprehensive and rigorously negotiated agreement can be an effective instrument in arresting Iran's nuclear program and prevent the spread of nuclear weapons in the volatile and vitally important region of the Middle East," the former diplomats wrote in a letter to the White House.

Twenty-nine top American scientists have also endorsed the deal, noting that it will "advance the cause of peace and security in the Middle East and can serve as a guidepost for future nonproliferation agreements." The group of scientists includes six Noble Laureates. In a letter to President Barack Obama, these experts pointed out that Iran was only "a few weeks away" from having fuel for nuclear weapons. The agreement would stop Iran's nuclear program, the scientists wrote.

Under the agreement, Iran agrees that it will not develop or acquire a nuclear weapon. The deal also includes a permanent ban on Iran's development of key nuclear weapon components and is based on four clear objectives, blocking the highly enriched uranium route, allowing no path to plutonium, intensive monitoring, and incentives for compliance.

Without the agreement there will be no restraints on Iran's nuclear program. There would more than likely be an arms race to acquire and develop nuclear weapons by various nations in the Middle East. Such a climate would not be in the best interest of our country, and certainly not in the best interests of the global community.

Currently eighty members of the House of Representatives and thirty-four members of the Senate have voiced their support for the deal. Lawmakers have nearly 60 days to review the agreement. If Congress votes to kill the deal, President Obama will use his veto power.

A two-thirds majority vote in the Senate is required to override a Presidential veto. It is my firm belief that if this deal is not implemented the world risks devastating military conflict. I urge my Congressional colleagues to support the agreement.

Open Enrollment in Texas Tuition Promise Fund® Began September 1

Open enrollment in the Texas Tuition Promise Fund, the state's prepaid college tuition program, began, Sept. 1, and runs through Feb. 29, 2016. Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar reminds families that the Texas Tuition Promise Fund offers parents and loved ones the chance to prepay a child's education at Texas public colleges and universities at today's prices.

"Hard-working Texas families want the best for their kids, and securing their future educations is a big part of that - unfortunately, setting a family budget for that can be challenging," Hegar said. "The Texas Tuition Promise Fund lets participants lock in today's prices for their children's educations at Texas public colleges and universities, and it has flexible options that families can use to fit their budgets."

Participants in the Texas Tuition Promise Fund purchase prepaid "tuition units" that can later be used toward undergraduate tuition and school-wide required fees at schools ranging from Texas public community colleges to four-year, in-state universities. Prices are based on 2015-16 academic year costs for the state's public colleges.

Type I units, priced for tuition and school-wide required fees for the most expensive public four-year school in Texas, cost $132.54 per unit.

Type II units, based on the weighted average cost of tuition and school-wide required fees across all Texas public four-year schools, cost $91.43 per unit.

Type III units, priced at the weighted average cost of tuition and school-wide required fees across all Texas public two-year schools, cost $23.35 per unit.

Under the plan, 100 units equal roughly one academic year consisting of 30 semester hours of tuition and school-wide required fees at the Texas public school that most closely matches the pricing base. Participants can purchase up to 600 Type I units, approximately six years, or the dollar equivalent of Type II and III units.

The plan's payment options include lump sum payments, installment payments that include 8 percent interest or a pay-as-you-go plan that allows participants to gradually add more units when the family budget allows. Payments can be as low as $15 after an account is established by paying a one-time fee of $25 and purchasing at least one unit.

The Texas Tuition Promise Fund is entering its eighth year. For more information about enrolling in the prepaid college tuition program, including a calculator that can help determine the type and number of units to purchase, go to TuitionPromise.org or call 1-800-445-GRAD (4723), Option 5.

O Divine Master,
Grant that I may not so much seek
To be consoled, as to console;
To be understood,
as to understand;
To be loved as to love.
For it is in giving that we receive;
It is in pardoning that we are pardoned;
And it is in dying that we are born to eternal life.
Amen.

BE KIND! Never speak harsh words. Be kind and gentle with your tongue. For it has been said that the tongue can be like a sword. Think long before you criticize your neighbor. Your tongue can be nasty. Living is one of the most beautiful things in the world. But the tongue can kill!

T.D. Jakes, the Dallas pastor and film producer who's no stranger to religious TV audiences, is making a play for the mainstream this summer with a new talk show.
Debmar-Mercury and TEGNA Media announced Thursday plans for a trial run on four TEGNA stations set to run between Aug. 17 and Sept. 11 of this year. The one-hour show will deviate from Jakes' spiritual programming of the past, instead focusing on "mainstream, headline-driven" content.
The show will be aired on WFAA in Dallas, from 3 to 4 p.m. WXIA in Atlanta: 2 to 3 p.m.
KARD IN Minneapolis: 2 to 3 p.m. And WKYC IN Cleveland: 2 to 3 p.m.

SERENA WILLIAMS BEATS SISTER VENUS AT US OPEN

Sisterly slam! Serena Williams inched closer to a Grand Slam title on Tuesday, Sept. 8, after beating her sister Venus Williams in the quarterfinals of the US Open at Arthur Ashe Stadium in NYC.

Serena, 33, the top-ranked female tennis player in the world, defeated her big sis after three sets, 6 to 2, 1 to 6, 6 to 3, and continued her bid for a Grand Slam. Following her sibling's win, a proud Venus gave Serena a sweet hug and said, "So happy for you."

Speaking about her victory later, Serena told reporters (via the Associated Press): "Obviously we are very, very tough competitors on the court, but once the match is over, the second it's done, you know, we're sisters, we're roommates, and we're all that."

With two more wins, Serena will be the first tennis pro in a quarter-century to win all four Grand Slam titles in one season, a feat that was last accomplished in 1988 by Steffi Graf. "That would be huge, not just for me, but for my family, just for what it represents and how hard we have worked and where we come from. So it would be a moment for our family," Venus, 35, told the AP on Tuesday. "But at the same time, if it doesn't happen it's not going to make or break you. We don't have anything to prove. She has nothing to prove. She's really the best ever."

My Day: An International Seminary

By Dr. J. Ester Davis

Dallas is bountifully blessed with everything. Grace International Seminary is a jewel among us and they recently held their Summer Commencement as mentioned in my earlier column, "Ask Dr. Hollie". Grace International Seminary is global indeed. Some of the graduates traveled to receive their Doctorate of Divinity Degrees from Grace International Seminary and Trinity International Seminary.

Let me share a few notes with you from Judge Yoo's master script.

Master of Ceremony Judge Yoo, proudly presides over Dallas County Criminal Court #8. She is a beloved personality and an accessible public servant all over the community she serves and beyond. I am going to borrow a copy of the script so I can righteously do justice to these honorees with divinity degrees. But until then, I will interpret my "shakey" shorthand and give you a brief rundown.

Sitting in the packed auditorium of mixed clergy, friends, family, alumni, overwhelming globalness, I reflected on the world that is "sensationally" framed to us on network media and the world of nurtured reality I was in the midst of at this commencement. A distinct highlight of the afternoon was a musical selection by the Nirankari Babaji Mission Youth Choir. Listening to the MC read the resume of Bishop Dr. Justice Ekejibi, Boston, Massachusetts, (his first name is Justice), I had to meet him afterwards. He is a renown speaker in West Africa, Europe and throughout the United States. Even with his universally laced credentials he was graciously humbling to speak with. Mike Ghouse, Washington, D. C., another honoree, is a friend. Mike is a daily blogger, with a strong media presence, Huffington Press among them, and an activist in interfaith cohesive building. Some years ago, early in my journalistic career, his organization (America Together Foundation) presented me with their "Rosa Parks Award". I was mesmerized with the vitae synopsis of Dr. Nicole Farmer, Detroit, Michigan. I will have to write about her. Known to us as "Yarbrough and Peoples", hit recording artist "Don't Stop the Music", aka, Alisa People Yarbrough and Cavin Yarbrough, received their doctorate degrees. Of course, they took the stage, Alisa on the piano and her husband/partner stood handsomely with the microphone engaging the audience, as has been their life work.

I am out of time. Not out of words. To be continued. . .

Thank you Bishop and Dr. Thibodeaux for sharing your world with so many around the world.
